

Volume 25
Issue 1 The Velvet Night

Article 21

4-20-2017

The Half-Life of Love - Short Story Contest

Hana Whisman

Follow this and additional works at: <http://commons.cu-portland.edu/promethean>

 Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Whisman, Hana (2017) "The Half-Life of Love - Short Story Contest," The Promethean: Vol. 25 : Iss. 1 , Article 21.
Available at: <http://commons.cu-portland.edu/promethean/vol25/iss1/21>

This Story is brought to you for free and open access by CU Commons:
Concordia University's Digital Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Promethean by an authorized administrator of CU Commons: Concordia University's Digital Repository. For more information, please contact libraryadmin@cu-portland.edu.

The Half-Life of Love

Short Story Contest

Our annual short story contest was inspired by Junot Diaz's quote, "The half-life of love is forever." Of the many beautiful submissions we received, the following are our winners and why our judge, former CU English alumna Hana Whisman, loved them:

1st Place - The Radioactive Half-Life of Love

This piece captures the internal struggle of love and logic, as well as the chaos of heartbreak. By personifying Heart, Brain, Pain and Love, the author articulates the push and pull - the conflict - that love brings. The beauty of this story is that these concepts are grounded not just with character, but vivid and powerful imagery.

2rd Place - Purgatory

This haunting piece captures the emotion, love and frustration that comes with a newborn baby. Emotion is developed through vivid imagery, which escalates throughout the story. The twist at the end is what really gives this story its weight.

3rd Place - feminism is for boys, too

This story shows the heartbreak of society's strict expectations toward gender. The argument of the piece is presented clearly via scenes of a broken child and his struggle in a world of toxic masculinity. The strength of the piece is its ability to capture the reader's emotions.