EX-BOYFRIEND

Katie Atkins

The gentle chills sent tenderly amidst my lips, is gone from the lust of your kiss.
White silk sheets slip smoothly between my creamy beige thighs, no longer open to your indignant tries.
Glaring moonlight licks partially opened white curtains, revealing brilliant skies as clear as your adulterous sins as you lie there naked bearing much more than your skin.
A cool breeze gently kisses the smooth curve of my silken spine, the way your unfaithful lips will never again caress the soft skin of mine.
Morning sun shall lighten my day with the shimmer of rays and the burden of your ways lifted from my heart's dismay.
I'm ending things now, my decision is made.
My heart is no longer the playground for your indecisive masquerade.
And when you shall wake, as I already know, there is a wide open door through which you will go.
