LULLABY FOR JOSIAH

Lance Raymond Eads

The sun is playing Hide-and-Seek.
The moon opens her eyes to peek.
She's counted high enough.
Evening proceeds from dusk.
Josiah, time to go to sleep.

The stars are winking 'cause they know
Exactly where the sun does go,
But they say that they won't tell.
They think it's just as well.
Josiah, to bed now we must go.

When dawn comes Moon will find the sun.
When Moon hides we will have some fun
Until it's time again.
The game goes on and then,
Josiah goes down with the sun.
