The Mountain Summited

Liana Parks

Everest was thought insurmountable, until it was summited;
The moon impossible, until man landed.
This heap of rot we call history exists
Because we continue
To sweep it
Away.
If we want this refuse consumed by fire, destroyed,
We must move it into the furnace together,
One shovel at
A time.
If we want to reach the fresh air at the top
We must commit to the climb,
One step at
A time.
Life does not have to be a heap of dung.
It can be beautiful, clean, restored.
But only if we are willing
To face our past
One day at
A time.
